Today's Program.....

Josie Parker, director of the Ann Arbor District Library, and Ellie Serras, director of the Downtown Development Authority who were introduced by Alan Caldwell, explained the $65 million dollar Bond Proposal to build a new downtown library. The issue will be on the November 6th, ballot. Here are some of the ten features that would be possible in a new building:

- * A destination, multi-age, youth area that could simultaneously accommodate open play, story times, and other youth programs.
- * A grand, quiet reading room.
- * A 400-seat auditorium to accommodate the crowds that the AADL's lectures, movies, discussions and performances already bring to Downtown.
- * Individual and group study and workspaces
- * A café that is open before and after the library hours
- * A Friends of the AADL shop in the lobby
- * An environmentally sound, comfortable, efficient structure that is accessible to all. The current 110,000 square foot building built in 1958, will be replaced by a 160,000 square foot facility. The Downtown Library averages over 600,000 annual visits, about 1,700 daily visitors daily. Since 2009, there has been a 21 percent increase in use of meeting rooms by outside organizations. The Downtown Library averages more than a million annual checkouts!
